Get Ready For Spring Road Trips

Spring is just around the corner and soon we will see milder temperatures, less rain and snow, and heed the call of the open road. Make sure your car is in tip top condition for your Springtime driving.

1. Thoroughly clean your car's exterior to get rid of any salt, sand, and dirt buildup.
2. Check your tires - apply lubricant to the threads of the lug nuts to prevent them from getting stuck in case you need to change a flat tire.
3. Inspect your brakes - if you see rust flaking from your brake pads or any cracks in the braking material or hoses, visit a mechanic for a proper brake check.
4. In winter, moisture can build up in your vehicle's interior—especially in older cars or vehicles parked outside. Removing this moisture prevents mold, corrosion, and electrical system damage.

5. Inspect your oil to make sure that it's an amber color.
6. Keep your antifreeze levels full year-round not only to prevent your cooling system from freezing but also to stop corrosion, lubricate the water pump, and raise the boiling point of the water.
7. Inspect all of your car's other fluids—like transmission, power steering, brake, and windshield washer fluids.
8. Your car's battery is a crucial component in keeping your car operating at its best. If you have an AAA membership, you can schedule a free battery, starter, and electrical test at your location.
9. Make sure windshield wipers, inside and outside lights, and air conditioning are functioning properly.

Will 2017 Be The Year Inflation Makes A Comeback?

This is the year inflation worries could begin to simmer for the first time in ages.

Consumer prices surged 0.6% in January from December, double the consensus forecast of a 0.3% rise. This marks the sharpest monthly increase since February 2013, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. In its 2017 outlook, Charles Schwab pulled inflation to its "front burner" list of concerns for stocks and pushed deflation to its "back burner."¹

Steven Wieting, global chief strategist at Citi Private Bank, expects President-elect Donald Trump's plans for fiscal stimulus and tax cuts to boost GDP by more than a full percent this year. But those programs should also bring some inflation.¹

You'll need to be especially aware of inflation in the following areas: Medical costs are on the rise, and they're significantly outpacing CPI inflation averages. In retirement, you're likely to need more medical care than you do at a younger age, so carefully consider medical inflation as you plan for retirement.

Food costs can be volatile. For example, dairy, beef and grains have seen pricing spikes in recent years due to factors such as drought, livestock illnesses and changing farming practices. Expect more of the same in the future.

Gold is off to a strong start in 2017, much like the strong start in 2016; in February delivery closed up 0.5% as some investors bet that the strengthening U.S. economy will bring inflation in the new year.²

But the interesting thing in 2017 is that gold is holding up this time around despite increased odds of a March FED rate hike. So, on the one hand gold should be dropping on increasing rate hike expectations, but on the other hand the spike in inflation is supporting the gold price.³

Celebrate Saint Patrick's Day!

Since around the ninth or 10th century, people in Ireland have been observing the Roman Catholic feast day of St. Patrick on March 17th.

More than 100 St. Patrick's Day parades are held across the United States - New York City and Boston are home to the largest celebrations.

Leprechauns are considered the only faerie to have a trade which is that of shoe-making. The famous Irish writer and poet, W.B. Yeats is quoted as saying because they dance so much, leprechauns are always in need of new shoes.

Chicago's annual dyeing of the Chicago River green started in 1962. That year, they released 100 pounds of green vegetable dye into the river—enough to keep it green for a week! Today, in order to minimize environmental damage, only 40 pounds of dye are used, and the river turns green for only several hours.

The IRS "Dirty Dozen" highlights various schemes that taxpayers may encounter

Watch out for the following scams that steal personal information, scam you out of money, and avoid any questionable behavior in filing your taxes.

Phishing: The IRS will not contact taxpayers via email about tax bills or refunds. Don't click on emails or fake websites claiming to be from the IRS.

Phone Scams: The IRS has seen a surge of phone scams in recent years as con artists threaten taxpayers with police arrest, deportation and license revocation if they do not make payment immediately.

Identity Theft: The IRS aggressively pursues criminals that file fraudulent returns using someone else's Social Security number, but taxpayers still need to be extremely cautious and do everything they can to avoid becoming victimized.

Also make sure your preparer and charities are legitimate.

Inflated Refund Claims: Avoid preparers who ask you to sign a blank return, promise a big refund before reviewing your records or charge fees based on a percentage of your refund.

Excessive Claims for Business Credits: Avoid misuse of the research credit and the fuel tax credits.

Falsely Padding Deductions on Returns: Claiming false income can lead to taxpayers facing large bills to pay back taxes, interest and penalties.

Abusive Tax Shelters: The IRS is committed to stopping complex tax avoidance schemes and the people who create and sell them.

Frivolous Tax Arguments: Think twice before taking advice to make a frivolous claim. The penalty for filing a frivolous tax return is $5,000.

Offshore Tax Avoidance: The recent string of successful enforcement actions against offshore tax cheats -- and the financial organizations that help them -- show that it's a bad bet to hide money and income offshore.

Is your yard attractive from a bird's eyes?

The songbird breeding season - mid-March through August - is a critical time for both resident and migratory birds in the United States, and your yard can provide much needed shelter and nourishment – in exchange, you can expect exuberant feathered visitors.

Provide Nesting Sites

Plant a variety of native shrubs and trees in multi-species clumps. A mosaic design - where species are overlapped and grown in clumps - mimics natural plant communities and, therefore, provides the best nesting habitat for birds.

Mow Smart

Many songbirds nest close to the ground in grasses and 'weedy' areas. Critical nesting habitat and even nests can be destroyed by mowing and routine yard maintenance. Set aside "no-mow" areas of your land, this will provide nest sites and shelter for several bird species, especially goldfinches, buntings, quail, and towhees.

Leave Dead Trees or Limbs

If dead trees or limbs do not pose a hazard, try to keep them in your backyard landscape. Natural cavities provide better nest sites than bird boxes.

Leave Brush Piles and Grass Clippings

Brush and grass piles provide shelter, nesting material, foraging grounds, and even nesting sites for birds. Set aside an area of your yard that you can leave cut branches and grass clippings undisturbed throughout the season.

Some ground nesting insects, such as Bumble Bees, may also set up housekeeping.
